

Harrison County Public Library Makerspace Usage Policy

The Harrison County Public Library's Makerspace at the Lanesville Branch provides a creative and collaborative environment where patrons can create projects, explore new technologies, and share innovative ideas. The makerspace is open to individuals of all skill levels, encouraging self-paced learning and fostering a sense of discovery.

The makerspace is home to a laser engraver, a filament 3D printer, a resin 3D printer, a large-scale vinyl printer, a sewing machine, a multi-needle embroidery machine, a serger, a Cricut, a Cricut-compatible heat press, a green screen, and digitizing devices for film reels, VHS tapes, and cassette tapes.

To Become a Maker

While the makerspace is open to people of all skill levels, patrons will be asked to sign an agreement and liability waiver before they are allowed access to the equipment. The form is available online and in print at the Lanesville branch. Patrons 17 years old and younger must have a parent present to sign or bring in their agreement. Patrons aged 12 and under may use the makerspace if supervised at all times by a parent or adult guardian.

All machines require one-on-one safety and training classes before patrons can have independent access. Patrons who have completed a course will have their certification kept on file. If more than a year has elapsed since a patron's last use of a machine, the safety class must be retaken.

Usage Guidelines

- Machines in the makerspace are available by appointment only. Reservations can be made by completing the form on HCPL's website or by calling 812-952-3759. Use of the laser engraver and embroidery machine is restricted to patrons 17 years and older.
- Machine use is free, however machines that utilize HCPL's consumable materials incur a fee. Fees are calculated based on material usage and must be paid even if the project does not come out as planned.
- The machines are all available for a maximum number of hours per patron per week, as scheduling allows. Time can be extended at the staff's discretion.
